1. The Chinese Communists are unprepared for peace in South China and are afraid of making a political mistake. They seem to regard the Peiping arrangement as a model and wish to make the same kind of arrangement in the south. They expect to take Shanghai in two months and all China this year.
2. The Chinese Communist military control organization Peiping devotes its energy to propaganda. There is no section for trade and commerce.
3. There appear to be instances of graft and corruption among Communist officials, and in their economic policy, the Chinese Communists seem to show no improvement over the Kuomintang.
